

Identifying SL course objectives:

- Select one or more objectives that can be best addressed through service-learning.
- Imagine activities that would help to accomplish those goals.
- Find one or more placements for students. Send students out to find their own placements.
- Provide students with clear guidelines for behavior, professionalism, and course objectives.
- Provide contact people with information about the course if they want it and give them your contact info.
- Provide students a consistent forum for discussing their experiences with you and/or the class.
- Design and assign a formal reflection activity.
- Provide a forum for feedback from the cooperating agency.
- Make clear connections between the service-learning activity and the course objectives throughout, but particularly at the end of the course.